

A close-up photograph of a dandelion seed head. The central part of the head is still attached to its brown, fibrous base. Several seeds, each with a long, thin stem and a white, feathery pappus, are shown in mid-air, having just blown away from the head. The background is a soft, out-of-focus green, suggesting a grassy field. The lighting is bright, highlighting the delicate structure of the seeds and the texture of the seed head.
